This week's most notable release is a blast from the past.

It's a small week this time around. Not many offerings, but fun is found in the smallest places, as mother would always say. Let's dive right in to see what's on the table this week:

Releases

Wii U eShop

Tiny Galaxy

– $5.99

Wii U Virtual Console

Blaster Master

– $4.99

— A game that took sidescrolling on its own little adventure by switching up the mode of transportation between on-foot and in-tank. Boasting eight separate areas and challenging gameplay, this game is loaded with content relative to other NES games.

3DS eShop/Retail

I am an Air Traffic Controller Airport Hero Narita

– $19.99

— You won't believe what you are in this game: an air traffic controller at Narita Airport. It's a simulation title, so you can expect to encounter all the everyday trials and tribulations air traffic controllers experience day in and day out. Exciting stuff.

I Love My Dogs

– $24.99

— Horses and other animals have found success in the I Love series. I haven't even seen a horse before playing the game, but now they're back with another new animal that people love: dogs. It's similar, in essence, to the Nintendogs series, but publisher Bigben really wants to make sure the point is made in its title: you love them.

Gee what a great lineup this week, with games people don't really want. Isn't this game already on 3DS? How about Super Mario RPG on Wii U? Or some other quality titles? I wonder if Battletoads in Battlemanics can be put on the Wii U, or if it's owned by Micro$oft now? At least they finally got around to putting the Donkey Kong Country games on the VC. I wonder too if the original Conker's Bad Fur Day can be ported over. That would be fun to play again. That big singing pile of turd you have to fight-hilarious.
